NATIONAL MOURNING

Not Many Evidences of it Are Noticeable.

EMBARGO RAISED ON PRESS

Franco's Downfall is Complete—He Will Not be Recognized Nor Will His Advice be Sought—His Whereabouts Not Known.

LISBON, Feb. 4.—Lisbon is beginning to recover from the shock and horror of Saturday's bloody tragedy, but a strong undercurrent of popular and governmental nervousness prevails. The political tension is slackening although progressists refuse to join in the concentration cabinet which Admiral Ferreira Do Amaral is forming from all the monarchical groups because the conservatives are in predominance. It is not unlikely that the difficulty will be straightened out and the country restored to a constitutional basis. On Saturday the government by decree will be withdrawn, and amnesty accorded political offenders not implicated in deeds of violence and the embargo on the press will be raised.

Franco's downfall is complete. He will not be recognized nor will his advice be sought by the new regime.

Franco's whereabouts are unknown. Many rumors concerning him, one that he fled across the border in an automobile, and another that he is on board a British cruiser.

A new cabinet was formed today with Admiral Do Amaral as premier.

A visitor would be struck by the absence of conventional signs of national mourning. Flags are half-masted and official life displays mourning band but there is little evidence of mourning decoration by the populace at large.

Most of the European countries are sending a special mission to attend the funerals including the Prince of Wales and Duke of Aosta. A constant procession of people crammed the royal palace today to view the bodies of King Carlos and the Crown Prince which will lie in state until late Friday night.

BULGARIANS, NIT!

Commissioner from Their Country Says "Stay at Home!"

CHICAGO, Feb. 4.—"Bulgarian immigration to the United States is a failure. Bulgarians had better stay in Bulgaria. They are better off there than in America."

That will be the substance of a semi-official report to be made to the Bulgarian government by P. N. Daskaloff, editor of the Vetcherna Pochta, a leading newspaper of Sofia who is touring the country for the purpose of studying the condition of Bulgarians here.

For the last few days Mr. Daskaloff, who is a grand officer of the Imperial Order Mejedie, has been looking into the matter in Chicago. He left for New York last night whence he will sail for home on Thursday after an American tour which has lasted nearly three months. The Bulgarian government recently passed laws in restriction of emigrants, and on receipts of Mr. Daskaloff's report probably will take still further steps to detain the Bulgarians at home.

"I have investigated the condition of this country in New York, St. Louis, Granite City and Madison, Ill., the latter places having the largest Bulgarian settlements in this country—and I find that Bulgarians have not bettered themselves by coming to America.

"In the last four years 90,000 Bulgarians have come to this country and this large loss has become a matter of concern to the government, the total population of Bulgarian being only four million."

Many Sleepless Nights, Owing to a Persistent Cough. Relief Found at Last.

"For several winters past my wife has been troubled with a most persistent and disagreeable cough, which invariably extended over a period of several weeks and caused her many sleepless nights," writes Will J. Hayner, editor of the Burley, Colo., Bulletin.

"Various remedies were tried each year, with no beneficial results. In November last she caught again put in an appearance and my wife, acting on the suggestion of a friend, purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The result was indeed marvelous. After three doses the cough entirely disappeared and has not manifested itself since." This remedy is for sale by Frank Hart and leading druggists.

ALMANACH DE GOTHA.

History of This Old and World Famous Institution.

The Almanach de Gotha is more than an almanac. It is an institution. Bravely arrayed in red and gold, it lies on the table of every diplomatist, is in constant request in the newspaper of fies of all countries and makes a wider and more international appeal than any other annual of reference in the world. It is to Europe what Burke and De brett and the other peerages are to the British Isles, and it is also the lineal ancestor and model of such topical encyclopedias as our Whittaker, our Hazell and our Statesman's Yearbook. A political and social history of the world for the last 150 years could be written from its back numbers if these were readily accessible to students. But they are not. The Almanach de Gotha began to appear in 1763, but the purchasers did not file it for reference. The earliest numbers in the British museum are those for 1774 and 1783, and a complete set can be consulted nowhere except in the editorial office in Friedrich's Allee in the little Thuringian capital. Probably not one in ten thousand of those who currently use the almanac has any knowledge of its interesting history.

It had of course its predecessors. The bibliographies of almanacs are ponderous tomes, and the middle of the eighteenth century was the golden age of this kind of literature. In Paris alone as many as seventy-three almanacs were published in the year 1760, including a royal almanac, an almanac for merchants, an almanac for Freemasons, an almanac of beasts, an almanac of badinage, etc. The city of Gotha itself had its own almanac from a still earlier date in the shape of an "Improved Gotha genealogical and writing calendar," the origin of which is lost in the mist of antiquity, though a copy dated 1740 survives.—Francis Gribble in Scribner's.

ADVERTISING AN ART.

But It Should Be Made an Art That Calls Beauty to Its Service.

Advertising has indeed become an art. It remains for it to become, if not a fine art, at least an art that calls beauty to its service. When it does, much of the energy that is now misdirected, much of the money that is now prodigally wasted in destroying the world's beauty, will be saved.

The right procedure is indicated by the most conspicuous medium for public advertising. The press, in its daily, weekly or monthly forms, offers altogether the best means for calling public attention to all sorts of things. The best of public journals—those which are recognized as the most desirable mediums for advertising and which consequently obtain the highest prices for their services—make it a rule to classify and restrict in a judicious manner the advertisements that they print. They confine them to certain parts of the publication, they restrict their display to certain decorous styles of type, recognizing that to admit a better skelter distribution through all columns or to display them in incoherent fashion according to the whims of the advertisers would largely destroy the very objects held in view. The readers of these journals would resent the intrusion of advertising matter into the space set apart for news, editorials, etc., and the influence that gives the advertising its value would decline.

In the same way the forms of advertising that now give exceeding offense to the community ought to be restricted and kept within proper limits. If this were effected the practice would change from the public nuisance that it now is to a function that, in a considerable degree, might couple genuine service to the public with a presentation of its material in an interesting and even esthetically attractive fashion.—Sylvester Baxter in Century.

TRAGEDY OF THE SEA

away from his post. A boat was lowered but was smashed and its crew of 15, including the third officers, were drowned. For 36 hours the crew fought the flames, but with small success. The foremast melted and fell, throwing a stowaway, who was hidden in the crow's nest into the flames which had by this time burned through the forward deck. There were nine stowaways on the ship and all were caught in the forward holds and burned to death without a chance of rescue. After the fall of the masts the fire was partially checked, but the poisonous fumes of fuel oil made fighting the fire almost impossible. The ship was loaded with fuel oil, matches, willowware and other inflammable materials.

The crew, however, kept up a gallant fight and were rescued only just in time, as the fire was rapidly gaining headway when the Cymric was finally enabled to put off the rescuing boat. All the rescued members of the crew were cared for on the Cymric and although many of them are badly burned, it is thought all will recover.

THE CALL OF CRIME.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 4.—Detective James Byrne, of Seattle police department, arrived in the city last night to take Nora Bracklin, under arrest there, who is said to have passed a number of worthless checks in the northern city, back to stand trial on a charge of obtaining money by false pretenses.
